

COBURN NOW 64.

Kansas Receives a Remarkable Birthday Souvenir.

Two Hundred and Fifty Letters of Congratulation.

BOUND IN A BIG BOOK.

All Testify to His Virtues and Usefulness.

Testimonials of Esteem From All Over the Union.

Secretary F. D. Coburn of the state board of agriculture is 64 years old today and his friends over the state and country to the number of some two hundred and fifty, sent him birthday letters. These have been bound into a book of birthday letters, entitled, "Each in His Own Tongue," and were leading the people of your great state along the line of material prosperity and intellectual research.

Norman J. Colman, first secretary of the United States department of agriculture. We have been told men's years are measured by the good they have accomplished, and, judging by the standard, you are a Methuselah in age, though the family Bible records your birth as occurring May 7, 1846. My own natal day is May 16, and in the years ahead of you there is room for additional achievement before you reach my age—85—which I certainly hope you may attain, and even many more years. May the years be many in which "Coburn of Kansas" can continue in the good work of showing the world the splendid achievements of his adopted state in nearly every line of agriculture, and may his work always be, as it has heretofore been, an inspiration to every one, whether so fortunate as to know him personally or whether so favored as to live in the grand state of Kansas.

Eugene Davenport, dean of the school of Agriculture, University of Illinois: "When the great bookmaker shall have closed his accounts, Coburn of Kansas will have a large balance to his credit. There will be the 'Swine Book,' the 'Alfalfa Book,' the 'Steer and His Sister,' the 'Helpful Hen,' and a score of other contributions to the permanent literature of agriculture. The United States and the world are indebted to the Sun-

Tribune: "It is indeed a pleasure for me to unite with others in congratulating you upon this day of your pleasure in rounding out three score and four years of an active and useful life. The talent bestowed have by you been multiplied for many years in benefiting and inspiring a generation with higher ideals and to accomplish more for itself."

W. J. Black, passenger traffic manager of the A. T. & S. F. railway, of Chicago: "I feel that I am voicing the sentiments of many friends in expressing the hope that you will disregard ordinary age limitations and continue your labors in the field you have so intelligently and acceptably filled for the past twenty years. At the risk of being accused of flattery, I feel it incumbent to say that until I moved from Kansas I did not realize the prominent position you occupy in the nation and the extent of your influence on agricultural questions."

Judge S. S. Ashbaugh of the Department of Justice at Washington: The old and now priceless manuscripts of Horace and Virgil containing precepts for the farm and rural life, are not from the standpoint of production worth one volume of the agricultural reports of the state of Kansas. You may not have made a great fortune for yourself in dollars and cents, but you, more than anyone else, have laid the foundation of a great agricultural commonwealth wherein ten thousand fortunes have been made. May your years yet to come be many, and every citizen of Kansas knows they will be fruitful.

Secretary of State C. E. Denton: "In recent years Kansas has forged to the front amazingly, and I believe that much of our glorious success, present enviable reputation throughout the world is due to your untiring and intelligent effort."

Sherman Elliott, member state board of control: "I wish to congratulate you for having passed the sixty-fourth milestone of life's journey and leaving behind you such a splendid record. No one who has known you and watched your splendid career can help but feel inspired to more earnest work, nobler efforts and higher aims in life. You lived for self alone, but throughout your long useful life your great heart and soul have breathed out to your fellow men and especially to Kansas. Statements may come and go, but the pictures hang on the walls of the offices which they occupy, to bear memory of their departed greatness, but your picture is indelibly impressed on the hearts and minds of the people of Kansas, and when in the course of life's journey you have passed the final milestone and been gathered to the eternal home of the faithful, which in the name of Coburn will go down in the annals of the history of Kansas and will be covered by the dust of ages, but will grow brighter with each succeeding year."

Following is a list of those who sent letters: Chas. F. Menninger, J. H. Miller, W. W. Mills, Duncan C. Miller, Frank H. Millspaugh, Charles L. Mitchell, J. C. Mohler, W. M. Moore, J. C. In 1911.

The head of the Smithsonian stood at the wireless long-distance telephone. "Hello! Is this Col. Roosevelt? Well, say, colonel, if you keep on sending in specimens of extraordinary animals, we will have to enlarge the institute and move Washington."

Back came the flash from the jungles. "Move Washington."

For even then the huge express vans were delivering an oribi, a bohor, a singing topi, and a kob.—Chicago News.

"Yes, I went fishing yesterday," began the man who tries to be original. "Luck! Well, some. I caught two fish. One was three and a half inches long, and the other two inches." But was he believed? Not much. After he had passed on some one commented: "Bet he didn't even get a bite."—Kansas City Times.
